

Work away from work

Outeroffice

Low vitality¹, high rates of sick leave², more vacancies than people searching for a job,³ and high staff turnover⁴. These are just some of the challenges companies are facing. What can you do to attract employees, and more importantly, keep them engaged?

Outeroffice offers companies the opportunity to let their employees work from inspiring locations in nature for a week. We have made sure you have everything you need to get work done, full board and two outdoor activities per week. Offering this to your employees will not only lead to more vital, but also more productive employees and a more attractive employer brand.

How and when you offer a week away with Outeroffice, depends on the needs of your company. You could offer it as part of the benefits, as a reward for people that stay with the company for more than xx years, but also as part of personal budgets, a bonus or to get to know a new team member.

We have two locations, one in Norway, one in Portugal. And there are more to come. We organise this for groups starting from four people. For more information, check outeroffice.nl.
